The only sensible man we over heard of respecting the fighting of duels was Gustavas Ling of Sweden-"the Lion of the North." as Walter Scott calls him. One of his officers challenged another. The king had them both before him. 'I hear there is a duel pending," I shall be present myself with the hangman. If one you falls, the bangman shall have the other. If neither of you fall, I will make one of you bang the other, and thed the hangman shall finish the job with the survivor." Gustavus heard ne more of duelling during his reign.
